Network Research

At the home of Scientific Linux
and petabyte data sets

Fermilab

Fermilab was an early and intensive deployer of hybrid (circuit and routed) networks.

Deployment and research are driven by the needs and aggressive data handling programs.

The "network" we research extends all the way into the end-system's memory management and process scheduling.